

FREE SOLO

SOFT SERENITY

>> A great bathroom has the power to touch all of our senses, and this bath designed by Rush Jenkins, principal creative/CEO of Jackson, Wyoming-based WRJ Design, along with team leader Sabrina Schreiber, is an exquisite example. In a home that merges Mountain Modern and traditional styles, this space looks out over aspen and spruce forests toward the Tetons. Guided by the homeowners' wishes—"They really wanted to have soft hues to create a serene bathroom," Jenkins says—the designers tiled the walls with Ann Sacks Mia marble to forge a harmonious connection with the outdoors. Logan Leachman, of JLF Architects, designed a vanity made of band-sawn white oak and steel that rests on heated limestone flooring, while a Waterworks burnished cast-iron Voltaire tub takes pride of place beside the window. "With a freestanding tub we're able to place the plumbing and drapes so that the drapes will frame the tub in a beautiful way," Jenkins says. "It can be a really special, framed, soft, serene moment." >>

ARCHITECTURE: JLF ARCHITECTS, jlfarchitects.com

INTERIOR DESIGN: WRJ DESIGN, wrjdesign.com

CONSTRUCTION: BIG-D SIGNATURE, bigdsignature.com

PHOTO: ED RIDDELL